First Quarter 2019 Weather(ly) Report
 April 2019

Time always continues ticking on; sometimes we make forward progress and other times we march a bit backwards, whether personally or in the investment markets. Education, creativity and the desire to problem solve develop an iterative process, helping to test and improve our likelihood of forward progress over time. Our core focus continues to be on planning and investments, allowing us to make an impact on our clients’ lives, families, businesses and communities. The strategy in how we deliver personalized advice, with clear communication and list of priorities for clients, is a key ingredient to forward progress. As technology evolves, the method of delivering advice effectively and securely to clients may change, but the impact remains the same. Outlining your choices as individual situations evolve is critical to improving for the future. Dialog for Impact continues to remain a pillar of our Firm’s philosophy.

Time has also been marching forward on a ten-year bull market despite taking a few steps back in Q4 2018. While global growth may be slowing, interest rates and inflation remain at historical lows in most parts of the world. We continue to evolve our investment strategy for a late stage bull market, a shared and connected world economy, incorporating thematic investing in new sectors and those ripe for disruption. Technology, Blockchain and Artificial Intelligence continue to play a role in most, if not all, industries. Client investments in these areas are adjusted to align with their long-term financial plan and when health, family and business changes call for change, asset allocation and investments can be modified as appropriate.

After the uptick in volatility in the final quarter of 2018, the first quarter of the New Year roared into recovery for stocks around the globe. The S+P 500 was up 13.65%, non-US stocks 10.31% and emerging markets up 9.91%. Interest rates reached a peak in the US after the Federal Reserve pushed the hold button on further rate hikes and the yield curve inverted (short rates rose above long rates) momentarily. Investments in municipal bonds and qualified dividends became even more important for clients in high tax states given the changes brought by the Tax Cuts and Jobs Act; planning initiatives in retirement funding and qualified charitable distributions remain paramount for all. The US Aggregate Bond Index appreciated 2.94%, municipal bonds 2.90% and the US dollar stayed relatively flat, up 0.21% versus a global basket of currencies continuing its high demand. Weatherly’s largest holdings are highlighted below elaborating on sector and company focus:

Geopolitical concerns continue to march on. While US and China trade tensions appear to have eased, the impact on global growth may create an additional drag. Meanwhile, Brexit tensions have increased with multiple Parliamentary votes and potential negotiations between party leaders. The noise from US 2020 elections has begun to gain volume on as budding candidates outline strategies and their impact on the US economy, healthcare and tax systems in a variety of distinct ways.

We continue to evaluate various geopolitical and economic scenarios that could create an environment of lower returns and higher inflation and the risk versus reward characteristics of investments; our team remains laser focused on controlling portfolio risk and adapting holdings for cash flow and tax implications, keeping the long-term plan at the forefront. We are proud to have served clients for 25 years in an evolving capacity as our clients and team grow. We welcome your questions and calls and look forward to our next dialog for impact.
